Where the beauty of culture comes alive

Based upon Roman models, this fine example of the early baroque style was designed in the 1920s by revivalist architect Henry J. Schlacks for the Carmelite friars of what was then St. Clara Church (later named St. Gelasius Church). This imposing edifice was devastated by fire in 1976. The church's disrepair and dwindling congregation led to its being closed and slated for demolition in 2002. However, because of its architectural importance and significance to the Woodlawn neighborhood, the community mobilized to salvage the church and successfully obtained its designation as a Chicago landmark.

His Eminence Francis Cardinal George offered this sacred edifice to the care of the Institute of Christ the King Sovereign Priest. The Institute has undertaken a complete restoration project for this architectural gem. This historic church is now coming back to life as a beacon of faith and culture where the beauty of the arts is available for the local community and beyond.
