INSTITUTE OF CHRIST THE KING SOVEREIGN PRIEST

“It is good for us to be here.”

In this Second Sunday of Lent, the Gospel is very appropriate because Lent is an ascent, and its goal is a transfiguration. Some Lenten practices are better than others. Hopefully this is turning out to be a good Lent for you, and you are feeling good about the prayers and penances you have been doing. Hopefully you have that feeling of confidence which tells you that things are going smoothly; that it will soon be Easter Sunday, and you'll be able to look back knowing that you spent this time growing in God's graces.

If so, good – keep at it!

But, for some of us, it may not be going so smoothly. You may be trying hard enough. But in spite of all of your efforts, you don't feel particularly close to God; you feel distracted in your prayers; you've been unable to keep to the fasting that you planned; you can't get into your spiritual reading. Briefly, you feel you are lagging behind.

We need to be aware that the devil seems to be more active during Lent because he is very envious that we can get so close to God, so He does everything in his power to frustrate our efforts, to make us feel badly so that we lapse into despair and depression.

So, let us take heart, let us remember that being discouraged during Lent may be just the result of the human condition, or it may be the devil trying to lead us away from God and into despair. A bit of difficulty in keeping a good Lent is not unusual. But a victory without battle is not a victory. It is why we ask for God's help and we trust Him to give the graces that are necessary.

Take heart, keep the faith, and make a good Lent!

St. Benedict, Abbot, March 21

Patron of the Institute of Christ the King

Mass at 8:00 a.m. ~ Plenary Indulgence ~

At all the turning points of history God raises up great saints to ensure the fulfillment of the church's divine mission for the souls of men. St. Benedict is a classic example of this.

St. Benedict was well-known for living in a cave as a hermit. During this period he made a close study of the Scriptures, and for the rest of his life, in complete self-dedication, gave all that God asked. "The finger of God had only to point, and he followed whatever the cost." The cave was a hidden retreat upon a barren mountainside, its whereabouts known only to a single friend who brought him food in secret, lowering it by rope over the mountain edge. After three years his popularity for spiritual guidance became widely known and he was chosen by the monks of a neighboring monastery to be their abbot.

Subject to the jealous persecution of a local priest, in 527 he traveled to Monte Cassino, 85 miles southeast of Rome, on the summit of which stood an altar to Apollo; there he tore down the pagan shrine and established the greatest and most famous of all monasteries, which became the home of the Benedictine Order. When he died in 543 there were 14 Benedictine communities, and by the 14th century there were over 30,000.

At Monte Cassino he wrote his great Rule which combined the Roman genius and the monastic wisdom of the Christian East. He imbued the monastic life with a new leaven that contributed to the formation of Christendom in the Middle Ages. A monk was to be a soldier of God, "a member of a spiritual garrison holding duty for Christ in a hostile world," and to be always on duty. It was a great and happy brotherhood with a strong family unity, so that wherever its members went they felt a common bond, and drew their strength from their home at Cassino, built upon the rock. He believed in the moral value of work; for idleness, he said, is hostile to the soul, and manual labor is part of the true pattern and glory of life. Thus work and study were joyfully intermingled, and each of his monasteries became a colony of God, a mission station with a civilizing influence for the dark night of Northern Europe.

From the Rule of St. Benedict: "Help those who are in trouble;" "Console the afflicted;" "Speak the truth from your heart as from your mouth;" "Attribute the good that you find in yourself to God, and not to yourself;" "Listen willingly to the Holy Scriptures;" "Honor those who are old;" "Love those who are younger;" "Pray for your enemies in the love of Christ.;" "Make peace, before the setting of the sun, with those from whom you have been separated by discord;" "And never despair of the mercy of God."

Feast of St. Joseph, March 19

6:00 p.m. High Mass

The model of domestic virtues and humble daily toil, the guardian of chaste souls, the protector of Christians homes, and patron of the Oratory, St. Joseph, foster-father of the Child Jesus, faithfully and humbly carried out the difficult and glorious mission entrusted to him. St. Joseph, Pray for us.

Prayer to St. Joseph

by St. Francis de Sales

Glorious Saint Joseph, spouse of Mary, grant us thy paternal protection, we beseech thee by the Heart of Jesus Christ. O thou, whose power extends to all our necessities and can render possible for us the most impossible things, open thy fatherly eyes to the needs of thy children. In the trouble and distress which afflicts us, we confidently have recourse to thee. Deign to take under thy charitable charge this important and difficult matter, cause of our worries. Make its happy outcome be for God's glory and for the good of His devoted servants. Amen
