Twenty-Second Sunday after Pentecost

At that time, the Pharisees went and consulted among themselves, how to ensnare Jesus in His speech. And they send to Him their disciples, with the Herodians, saying: Master, we know that Thou art a true speaker, and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest Thou for any man, for Thou dost not regard the person of the men. Tell us therefore, what dost Thou think? Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not? But Jesus knowing their wickedness, said: Why do you tempt Me, ye hypocrites? Show Me the coin of the tribute. And they offered Him a penny. And Jesus saith to them: Whose image and superscription is this? They say to Him: Caesar's. Then He saith to them: Render therefore to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's.

Liturgical Calendar: What is the Difference between a Sunday After Pentecost in the Traditional Calendar and an Ordinary Sunday in the Novus Ordo Calendar? For most of Church history, until the establishment of the new liturgical calendar in 1970, there was no “Ordinary Time” in the Catholic calendar. Rather, we celebrated what were called the weeks after Epiphany and the weeks after Pentecost, the two major solemnities that closed out the Christmas and Easter seasons, respectively. In the Novus Ordo calendar, all of these weeks were grouped together and called “Ordinary Time”. Here, “ordinary” does not mean what it usually means in English, that is, “commonplace, or standard”; instead, it refers to the counting of weeks in “ordinal” numbers, which number items in a series, such as “first, second, third” etc. In the official Latin, this time is referred to as tempus per annum, or “time through the year”.

Because the date of Easter varies from year to year, and since there are only fifty-two weeks in the year, the lengths of the time after Epiphany and the time after Pentecost will vary from year to year. In the Novus Ordo, these are all numbered starting with what we would call “Weeks after Epiphany” and continue on after Pentecost. This is why you will observe a difference in the week number between the two rites beginning after Pentecost, although there is really no difference in the total number of Sundays.
