Dear Faithful,

On January 29th, we celebrated the 400th anniversary of the death of our holy patron Saint Francis de Sales. 100 years ago, commemorating the 300th year since his entrance into eternity, the Holy Father Pius XI wrote an encyclical letter Rerum Omnium Perturbationem in which he commemorated this event and set forth Saint Francis de Sales as a model and master of sanctity for each of us. The Holy Father wrote, "The meekness of St. Francis should be held up to the faithful in a very special way for their imitation, for this virtue recalls to our minds so well and expresses so truly the kindness of Jesus Christ. It possesses, too, in a remarkable degree the power to bind souls one to another. This virtue, wherever it is practiced among men, tends primarily to settle the differences both public and private which so often separate us. Likewise can we not hope that, through the practice of this virtue which we rightly call the external sign of the inner possession of divine love, there will result perfect peace and concord both in family life and among nations? If human society were motivated by meekness, would this not become a powerful ally to the apostolate, as it is called, of the clergy and laity which has for its end-purpose the bettering of the world? You can easily see, therefore, how important it is for the Christian people to turn to the example of holiness given by St. Francis, so that they may be edified thereby and may make his teachings the rule of their own lives."

I could not have said it better myself! In this 400th year since his death, let us seek to grow in knowledge and love of our holy patron and his remarkable spirituality!

Rev. Canon Luke Zignego
